SCHOOL CALENDAR

1927
Nov. 30-Dec. 3, Wednesday to Saturday. Examinations.

1928
Mar. 16, Friday. Spring Recess from March 16 to 29, inclusive.
June 7, Thursday. Anniversary Day.
June 8-12, Test Examinations of Fifth and Sixth Forms.
June 15-19, School Examinations.
Dear Alumni:

I have just come back from the Big Study this evening, sitting there on the platform and talking things over with the boys. First of all, I showed them an autographed picture of Einstein, which has come to the School from Ambassador Houghton via Dr. Charles Hart. These two Alumni, as thoughtful as generous, have been providing from time to time autographed pictures of contemporary leaders. Thus we have many of the generals in the Great War, and other notables, which will increase in historic value as the years pass.

I then showed to the study-full some figures relating to our college examinations. Our percentage of success in these June tests was 90%. It is our natural ambition to decrease the percentage of failure year by year. That, however, is not the whole story. We plan to increase the quality of the pass mark. Would you rather have 100% of success and all the marks just about 60, or 95% of success and half of the marks 90%? You will agree with me that the latter is the better state. Excellence in quality is the thing we are after. Now last June, 328 examinations were taken, and of these 132 or 40% were of honor grade (That means 80% or better). 12% of the total, or 40 examinations, were of highest honor grade (90% or better). My feeling is that if we definitely try to improve our record, we have each year enough fine scholars in the Sixth Form to put this School well in the van. People may say that it is commercialism to talk about marks, that passing examinations is simply an exercise of low cunning; but it is clear to me that when a group of very able Sixth Formers plans to achieve fine records for their School, they are neither selfish nor commercial, but altruistic. Such a group gathered in my study last week. They understand that we expect great things from them, and I took the initiative in saying that the School stands gladly ready to grant privileges, which are naturally appreciated by schoolboys as well as by older folks, in recognition of their efforts for the School.

Schools and colleges all over the map have been lauding the athletic hero and the extra-curriculum leader to the great disadvantage of the scholar; and all over the map educational institutions have been reaping the harvest of their wild and hypocritical sowing. They have called themselves educational establishments, but in reality many of them are in the athletic business, commercializing what should be amateur pastimes. Headmasters and college presidents and newspapers have been praising to the skies the hero of the field and have neglected the hero of the study. The ideal of American education this past three decades has been the Farnese Hercules,—a figure with back and limbs like a giant tree and head like a walnut! We press upon the athletic hero superb vases and burnished mugs. To the scholastic hero we give a little slimy book.

All this I was telling the boys in the Big Study and taking my share of blame. What ought the schoolmaster to do for the fine scholar? He ought to give him every privilege that the extra curriculum stars receive, and "then some." Take young Callaway, for instance, our first St. Paul's Scholar, with his ninety odd per cent. of ranking all last year. I ought to say to him: "Callaway, if you want to go to the Yale Game, go." If Gordon or Smith (3), also St. Paul's Scholars, intimated that a cousin was going to be married week after next, what should I say? Not "No boy can leave this School except for the wedding of a brother or sister," but "Scholars like you are entitled to attend any kind of a wedding you choose." Daily life is based on rewards and punishment,—you can't get away from that; and my point is that we have not delightedly but merely grudgingly honored the scholar. We have let second-rate and third-rate things crowd out the first-rate things; and although general leadership and athletic excellence are noble in themselves, a School is hypocritical that allows even these noble things to occupy its highest pinnacle. So if you hear that strange liberties are creeping into this School, take notice now that such liberties will all be connected with fine scholarship. This ought we to do and not to leave the others undone. The recent publication in a great New York paper by colleges of all their ranking scholars is a significant step in the honest direction.

Read the list and recognize the names. You will find there the sons of many of your friends. Perhaps your own son's name. The School congratulates these boys and the old boys who are connected with them.

The other day I made a sad discovery. I can no longer run up Jerry Hill! Men in their later forties find these limitations irksome. Dependence on eyeglasses, regard for diet, curtailing of tobacco, all obtrude themselves. But it is worth while on an autumn day briskly to walk up Jerry Hill and with any one of you I shall run down without a stop, and then have a nice jog trot through the Ferguson Woods, all glistening and swaying with its glorious giant pines. I never climb Jerry without falling into a sort of grateful litany: "May Heaven protect George Sheldon, who gave us this hill; William Flint, who surveyed it; Charles Dickey, who gave us this lookout; and Gregory Wiggins, who designed it.” It is pleasant and profitable, too, to survey the School on one side and Long Pond on the other from that hill top. There lies the lake than which Como or Bellagio are not fairer, while far away to the right one sees the Chapel tower and hints of roofs and fields, among which work and romp all these sons and brothers and young friends of yours. Surely the lot has fallen unto us in a fair ground,—we can make it a goodly heritage, if we will.

Faithfully your friend,

S. S. DRURY.

THE SCHOOL IN ACTION

The 20th of September marked the opening of the 72nd year of the School’s existence, and the arrival of 99 new boys, together with those old boys who had examinations to take, created the usual stir of orderly confusion. The assembly of the whole School on the next day found 416 boys enrolled.

Several of last year’s faculty have left the school, most of them for similar work elsewhere. Mr. Lambert F. Whetstone (1908-1912), who for ten years had been a useful master here, was married in July and has gone to the Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia; Dr. James H. Townsend has taken up private practice in Boston; Mr. Balfour S. Tyndall has gone to the Hill School; Mr. G. A. Gray is at the Grace Church Choir School in New York; Mr. Robert E. Dwyer is physical director at the Chicago Latin School. Additions to the faculty are Dr. H. M. Haslam (1913-1919), as Health Director, Mr. J. S. Black (1916-1922), Mr. J. R. Fillman, Mr. George Conwell, Mr. Richard Parkhill, as gymnasium instructor, and Mr. R. R. Eastman. During this term, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Edmonds are on leave to study abroad, while Mr. Kittredge and Mr. Merrick are back after their absence in the Spring. It is especially pleasant to have Mr. Foster, the Vice-Recto with us, following his recovery from his serious illness last Winter.

Last year was one of success so far as the School examinations are concerned, for our percentage of failure was about 6%, by far the lowest we have ever had. The results of the College Board were, however, very little different from our former rate. The Honor Groups, instituted a year ago, have already proved their value and will continue, while this year sees the first award of the St. Paul’s School Scholarships, of the value of $1,000. and $500., to be given each year to the two boys of the Third Form who have the best record during their Second Form year or in entrance to the Third Form, and to be held by them throughout their school careers so long as their high stand is maintained. This year the first scholarship was awarded to James E. Callaway of New York, and the second was divided because of their close rank, between George W. Gordon and George R. Smith, also of New York. The holders of these scholarships are to be granted special privileges in the School.
The summer saw a great many minor changes in buildings, improvement of rooming facilities, the addition of more Masters' rooms, and a new Lower School Boat House, much needed for a long time. This construction-work, however, is overshadowed by the greatest change in many years, the openings of four new dormitory-buildings, called by the names of their donors, Simpson, Ford, Manville and Brewster. These houses, designed for 31 boys, a married master and a single master, now are occupied by the boys who formerly lived in the alcoves of The School, and that venerably ugly building serves only as a dining-room. Even that service will be short lived, for a new dining hall may soon be erected, possibly on the side of the present power-plant, which has been superseded by the splendid new one which has been at work for the past few days. Detailed description of these buildings is unnecessary here, for they have been described more than once in other places.

The week-end of October 15th, the time of the annual Fall meeting of the Board of Trustees, was also the occasion of the dedication of the new buildings. On that Saturday a formal lunch at the Upper School brought together the groups of those most interested, the Rector, the donors, the Trustees, the architects, the builders and especially Mr. Joseph T. Walker, for many years the School's business manager, whose indefatigable efforts in supervising and coordinating the work made it possible to use the buildings at the opening of school. After lunch, speeches were made by the Rector, The Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes (1891-1892), for the Trustees Building Committee, by George Munson, President of the VI Form, for the boys, and by Mr. Reeve Schley, (1897-1899) President of the Board of Trustees.

From the Upper School, adjournment was made to the Quadrangle of the new dormitories, where the houses were formally opened, each by some member of the donor's family and cornerstone boxes were inserted. The Rector, assisted by Mr. Brinley, held the brief religious exercises of the dedication, and the ceremony was concluded by a visit to the power-plant, where the building was opened by the son of the principal donor and the generator was put into operation by the son of another donor.

The Interclub football season closed very successfully on November 2nd with the Club Championship going to the Old Hundred Club. The second team series was a tie and the Old Hundreds also won the 3rd, 5th and 6th team championships, while the Delphians won the 4th.

The football season ended on November 19th, with a game between the S. P. S. and the Episcopal Academy of Philadelphia. The latter is coached by Mr. Whetstone, who was for seven years head-coach of the S. P. S., and its formidable record in Philadelphia, combined with a dearth of high-class material here, resulted in a victory for the Episcopal Academy. We have had as usual 24 teams competing in the various series, all of which were closely contested except the 1st teams in the Lower School, where the Ishmians were very strong.

With the granting of Cricket Holiday on the 14th of October, the term was well under way, and the year looks happy in prospect.
ORGANIZATION MEETING OF THE STANDING COMMITTEE

The organization meeting of the Standing Committee of the Alumni Association of St. Paul's School was held on Thursday, November 10th, 1927, at the University Club, 1 West 54th Street, New York, N. Y. The meeting was preceded by a dinner in the Council Room of the Club, at seven-thirty o'clock, at which thirty members were present.

In the absence of the chairman, the meeting was called to order by the President of the Alumni Association, Frederick B. Adams, who read a telegram of good wishes from Dr. Drury.

Mr. Adams then nominated William Fellowes Morgan, '76, as chairman of the Standing Committee for the ensuing year and he was unanimously elected. Mr. Adams nominated Joseph H. Coit, '81, as secretary of the Standing Committee for the ensuing year and he was unanimously elected.

The reports of the various Committees were read and approved.

The Chairman then nominated the members of the Executive Committee of the Standing Committee for the ensuing year. It was moved that the committee, as nominated, be elected and after being duly seconded the motion was carried and the committee was declared elected. (See list on last page of this number.)

Richard M. Hurd, '83, was appointed Chairman of the Alumni Fund Committee for 1928. The members of the Committee will be appointed later.

The usual committees were appointed by the President (as listed on the last page of this number).

It was unanimously voted that the President appoint a committee to prepare plans for a History of St. Paul's School, from 1856 to 1931; the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary of the School's existence.

Reeve Schley, '99, President of the Board of Trustees of the School, spoke at some length on the state of the School.

John P. Wilson, '96, Fourth Vice-President of the Alumni Association and President of the Chicago Branch of the Alumni Association, expressed his pleasure at being present at the meeting and spoke of the desire of the Chicago alumni to co-operate in every possible way with the Association.

It was unanimously voted that the Alumni Association arrange to have painted and present to the School a portrait of William Hamilton Foster, '81, Vice Rector.

WAR MEMORIAL FUND

The War Memorial Fund Committee began its active work with a dinner at the University Club on March 11th, 1927, at which 26 Form Agents were present, as well as members of the Executive Committee and members of the War Memorial Committee.

John M. Goetchius, '90, chairman of the War Memorial Committee, explained at some length the activities of his committee and the final selection of the beautiful design by Daniel Chester French. Immediately after the dinner was held brochures and letters were sent out to all alumni, and to certain friends of the School who it was thought would be interested in seeing them. To these letters there was a generous response.

Later in the Spring the Form Agents were requested to correspond with the members of their Forms who had not responded to the letters and ask them for subscriptions to the War Memorial Fund.

As chairman of the committee, I desire to take this opportunity to express my very warm appreciation of the splendid cooperation which the Form Agents gave me in this matter of collecting these funds. The effort terminated at Anniversary, June 1st.

Many appreciative letters commending the design of the sculptor were received by the Committee.

The number of alumni who subscribed was 862 and the number of friends who subscribed was 15, the total amount subscribed being $43,082.

R. M. Hurd, '83, Chairman.

ALUMNI DIRECTORY

The formal start of the new edition of The Directory of the Alumni of St. Paul's School was made in June, questionnaires having been sent to all alumni of record. To this first questionnaire about 2,000 out of a total of 3,951 responded.

It was very gratifying to the committee in charge of the work to have many alumni take pains to send in addresses and information about men on the "lost list." This list, owing to the cooperation of the alumni, has been reduced from 292 names to 139 names.

We have to record the loss of the following alumni who have died in the last few years, the record of whose deaths was unknown to the officers of the Alumni Association, until this list of lost men was broadcast.
In September a second questionnaire was sent to all those alumni who had not responded to the first one. It is quite possible that some alumni received the second questionnaire who had already answered the first one, but that must be attributed to an excess of care on the part of the staff. To this second questionnaire there have been received 275 replies. At the time of going to press with this number of the ALUMNI HORAE the committee has yet to hear from 1,600 alumni and a third questionnaire has gone out.

The number of orders received for the Alumni Directory has been unusually large and it is very gratifying to the committee to see that so many of the alumni desire to possess the book. To those who have ordered copies the committee desires to say that any delay in their obtaining their copies will be due to the failure of the committee to receive prompt replies to its questionnaires; and to those alumni who have not yet sent in their questionnaires we appeal most urgently to fill them out and return them as soon as possible, and if for any reason these questionnaires have not reached all alumni, those alumni who have not received them are requested to write to Joseph H. Coit, Executive Secretary, 49 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL IN THE GREAT WAR

It is gratifying to be able to announce that “St. Paul’s School in the Great War” has now been published in its complete form, with an adequate index. Sufficient copies have been sold to pay for the expense of manufacture.

Many of the alumni whose service records are recorded in the book have already ordered copies but the committee in charge of publishing the book feels that there must be a number of other alumni who saw service in the war who desire copies but who have not yet ordered them. Because of the committee’s belief that this is the case an order blank is enclosed in this number of the ALUMNI HORAE and alumni are urged to fill it in and return it promptly, as the number of available copies of the book is limited.
GIFT TO THE SCHOOL FROM THE FORM OF 1901
Mr. Charles D. Dickey, Treasurer, St. Paul's School, 59 Wall Street, New York City.
Dear Mr. Dickey,

As Form Agent of the Form of 1901, Alumni Association of St. Paul's School, I am writing in regard to a fund to be given to the School through the Alumni Association to establish a scholarship; a check for $6,168.45 having already been forwarded to Mr. Trowbridge Callaway, Treasurer of the Alumni Association.

I have been instructed by the members of the Form to deed the money to the School on the following terms and conditions:

First:—That the scholarship be known as the Philip Overton Mills-George Williamson Memorial Scholarship.

Second:—That the interest and any additional subscriptions be added to the principal amount until such time as the fund amounts to $10,000.

Third:—As soon as the fund amounts to $10,000, the interest thereon to be used for the benefit of a son or relative of a member of the Form of 1901; and if there is no such boy in need of assistance, then the income to be used in the sole discretion of the Rector for the benefit of some boy or boys at the School.

Yours very sincerely,
R. H. Cox, Form Agent.

NEW YORK HOCKEY GAME
PRINCETON FRESHMAN vs. ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL

A hockey game in Madison Square Garden between the Princeton Freshmen and St. Paul's School teams has been arranged for the afternoon of Thursday, December 22nd, at 3:30 o'clock. At the conclusion of the game there will be a reception to President Hibben, of Princeton University, and Dr. Drury in the Club Rooms of the Madison Square Garden Club, to which all alumni and friends of the School are invited.

Tickets for the game for promenade and arena seats can be obtained at the box office at Madison Square Garden. Tickets for the boxes can be obtained only through the office of the Alumni Association at 49 Wall Street, New York, N. Y. (Hanover 7578). As this is the only reunion of Alumni and friends of the School planned for the winter in New York it is hoped that there will be a large turnout at the game. Bernon Sheldon Prentice, '01, is Chairman of the Committee in charge of arrangements.

A LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE BIG BROTHER MOVEMENT

To the St. Paul's School Alumni: November 12, 1927.

For a number of years St. Paul's School Camp has taken groups of boys of less fortunate circumstances from New York City through the Big Brother Movement.
A number of St. Paul's School alumni have been connected with the Big Brother Movement and among the officers and Directors of the Movement at the present time are the following old St. Paul's School boys—

Hon. Franklin Chase Hoyt, '92, Presiding Justice of the Children's Court, who was for many years President of the Movement; Joseph C. Baldwin, III, '16; Duncan H. Read, '15; and the undersigned.

Among the members are:

Wm. Harmon Brown, '19; Winfield K. Shiras, Jr., '16.

At camp every effort is made to understand the boys; to help them strengthen their character so that when they return to their homes they may have a new outlook on life.

This effort made at camp, however, needs to be followed up if permanent results are to be realized. At the suggestion of Mr. Godfrey M. Brinley, '83, who is in charge of the St. Paul's School camp, and with the cordial approval of the Big Brother Movement, it is planned to hold a meeting of certain of the St. Paul's School alumni in New York City at which the work of the Big Brother Movement would be discussed and an opportunity for anyone interested to volunteer to act as a Big Brother to one of these underprivileged boys. No financial assistance is sought, simply the personal interest and friendship of a Big Brother who will help his Little Brother with his advice and occasional companionship.

The Big Brother Movement was founded twenty-three years ago and has helped over 12,300 boys, over 90% of whom have made good.

Due notice of the meeting referred to above will be sent to St. Paul's School alumni in New York City who have graduated within the last ten years.

The undersigned will be glad to give any further information about the work of the movement to anyone interested.

Yours sincerely,

ALONZO POTTER,
President, Big Brother Movement, Inc.
St. Paul's School, '86-89.

BOOK NOTICE

DANTE By John Jay Chapman

It seems to the undersigned that we owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Chapman for his treatise on the Poet of the "Divine Comedy". Few of us are very familiar with Dante and Mr. Chapman is so well equipped in the learning of the ages and is himself so distinguished as a poet, and has the analytical faculty so well developed, that he is able to supply us with an able and interesting and well digested essay on the Inferno and Purgatorio and Paradiso.
In the matter of Dante and his poetry, the writer of this article confesses that he is in the position of the man who wrote the essay on Chinese Metaphysics. In order to do this, the essayist looked up the word China in one part of the encyclopedia and metaphysics in another part, and combined his information.

Of the general character of the Inferno, most of us have received a very vivid impression of Dante's poetical conceptions from the admirable drawings of Gustav Dore which embellished the pages of the red and gold bound volumes which adorned our drawing room tables. Our architects are fond of carving the name Dante together with Hesiod and Sappho on the friezes of our Public Libraries.

We learn then from Mr. Chapman that "Dante is tense and personal, often harsh, and always full of purpose and calculation . . ."

Also, "To Dante the antique tradition that the obscurities of poetry contained something of the Divine, and that the Poet was a sort of priest or teacher of the higher life, was the main fact about poetry. Dante believed that the Poet spoke with the voice of God; and indeed he lifted the classic conception of the Poet's function into a region of authority which the Greeks and Latins had no thought of. His own sleepless ambition to be a poet, and a great poet, is proclaimed consciously and unconsciously in all his writings till the reader almost blushes for him." In other words, Dante took himself seriously.

Mr. Chapman says also:—"The beauties of Dante are untranslatable, and cannot even be suggested unless they come flashing in upon us as side-lights, unexpectedly and in the course of some passage that is long enough to suggest the march of pilgrimage of the whole poem. And here there arises a new difficulty; for there is hardly a long passage in the 'Divine Comedy' which is not encumbered with scientific theory, with historic allusion or metaphysical discussion, or with some pet hostility of Dante's which is in its nature hard-fisted and unpoetic;—very interesting, but a thing which it requires years in a library to understand, and an educated sympathy to respect." So it would seem that Dante was a moralist and a preacher as well as a poet, but Mr. Chapman goes on to say "The happiest touches in the 'Divine Comedy' are descriptive—whether of natural scenery, of sky and air, dawn, dusk or moonlight; or else of monsters and myths, Centaurs, the Minotaur, and other creatures whose very names have a beauty that lifts them out of their sallow mediaeval setting and the din of dogmas. The classic monsters are so far removed from mankind that they do not excite Dante's contempt for his species. Charon is in human form and therefore an unpleasant personality. But Minos, Pluto, Cerberus, and Geryon are sheer monsters, and have something of the Domesticity of heraldic animals."

Mr. Chapman observes:—"Across the sky of antiquity there hung ever the gloomy shadow of a Hereafter that was uncertain and probably unpleasant. Whatever Hades or Sheol may have meant to any believer or unbeliever of ancient times, they represented a sad makeshift for all that was obviously enjoyable in this world . . ."
"The developments of doctrine and of discipline in the Christian Church magnified both the joys and the sufferings of a Hereafter to the point of incandescence; and, by persuading men that the matter was of greater importance than anything in the actual world, the Church all but transplanted both these future joys and future pains into current experience. So terrific was this strange perversion of man's imagination that it continued to dominate many Protestant sects down to the Eighteenth Century; and the preoccupations of Cotton Mather and Jonathan Edwards as to future rewards and punishments differ rather in form than in substance from the teachings of the Roman Church in the Thirteenth Century. To be prepared for death was the main purpose of life."

Mr. Chapman says:—“Dante pushed the pristine conception of the poet as a teacher so far as often to become himself a mere schoolmaster . . ."

“He walks on the stage to deliver a lecture, and keeps his personality ever between his audience and his subject . . .”

Dante according to Mr. Chapman, seems to have been a very considerable egoist:—“Dante had no playmates in his youth. His acquaintances, outside of a few artistic, literary, or musical natures, seem to be confined to titled persons and to such as live in castles. He dislikes the common herd, and if he mentions a peasant it is generally to bark at his rags, like the little dogs in ‘King Lear’ . . .”

Mr. Chapman also says:—“The ‘Divine Comedy’ is Dante’s political testament and personal justification. Indeed, this aspect of the poem is at times so obvious as to obscure its more poetic meanings. The plan and conduct of it seems to give a new and somewhat elaborated reading of the Book of Job—one in which the Patriarch finally triumphs by solving the enigma in his own favor and blazoning his justification through the voice—the many voices—of God.”

It seems that Dante was also opposed to the Papacy and the Government:—“I do not think that either Luther, Calvin, or John Knox ever conceived of such supernal opposition to the Papacy as was Dante’s bread and meat for many years. All that those northern reformers wanted was to be left alone. But Dante invades and browbeats the Roman Pontiff. He taught the Italians to hate the Vatican, and his influence it was which, more than any other thing, led to the triumph of the Risorgimento and the unification of Italy in the last century.”

Mr. Chapman says that:—“The greatest triumph of Dante has been that his claim to be not only a poet, but a philosopher, is generally allowed . . .”

“Dante in his great work has provided both a feast for the lovers of romance and a banquet for the earthworms of literature who are always delving about the roots of history and fertilizing the soil . . .”

Altogether, I gather from Mr. Chapman’s treatise, that Dante had a wonderful imagination based upon the Classic imaginary picture of the regions of the soul after death, unsurpassed powers of description and a very strong sense of ethics and morality, and possessed a real fire in expressing his diatribes against iniquity.

PERSONAL NOTES

The Publication Committee of the Alumni Horae wishes that it had room to print in this number the very many interesting accounts of alumni which have been received, in response to the request of the committee, from all over the country, from Europe and from South America. These records come from alumni engaged in large commercial enterprises, in finance, in agriculture, in the learned professions and in research work. They show how fully the alumni of St. Paul’s School are entering into the life of the nation and what contributions they are making to its growth. A selection of the many records received has been made for publication in this number of the Horae. It is the earnest hope of the Publication Committee that alumni will continue to send in such information about themselves which will be of interest to the large body of alumni.

’74—George Halsey Perley (K.C.M.G.) re-entered Parliament at the general election of 1925 as Member of the House of Commons for Argenteuil, Que., and was re-elected in the general election on September 24th, 1926, being Secretary of State in the Meighen administration of 1926.

’76—William Fellowes Morgan has been elected Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Wells College, Aurora, N. Y.

’78—George William Lay, besides being Rector of St. Paul’s Church, Beaufort, N. C., and Minister in Charge of St. Andrew’s Church, Morehead, N. C., is Chairman of the Committee on Canons and member of Executive Council. Diocese of East Carolina; Vice Chairman of Dept. of Religious Education, Province of Se­wanee.

'78—Charles Ernest Pelley (Viscount Exmouth) is now residing at Hindhead, Surrey, England, about forty miles southwest of London, on the main Portsmouth Road.

'80—Lawson Purdy is Vice-President and Treasurer of the Russell Sage Foundation and is Secretary of the Commission to Examine and Revise the Tenement House Law.

'81—George William Sutton is Commissioner of Assessment and Taxation of the City of New Rochelle, N. Y. He has held this office since 1916.

'82—James Shaler Hodges is principal examiner of the Division of the Patent Office handling the applications for improvements in electric machinery and general transmission work.

'84—John Pierpont Morgan has had the following degrees conferred upon him: LL.D. by Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., in 1918; LL.D. by Cambridge University, England, in 1919; LL.D. by Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., in 1923, and D.C.S. by New York University, New York City, in 1922.

'85—Frank Thornton Arms was transferred in 1925, at his own request, after thirty years of service to the Retired list of the United States Navy.

'85—Charles Cheney, beside being President of Cheney Brothers, silk manufacturers, is President of The Silk Association of America, Vice-Chairman of the National Industrial Conference Board, Director of the Chemical National Bank of New York, of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, of the Connecticut Company (electric traction) of New Haven and of the General Silk Co. of New York. In 1920 Mr. Cheney led an official Silk Mission to Japan and China.

'85—Stuart Auchincloss Coats (Baronet) was Private Chamberlain of Sword and Cape to Pope Pius X, to Pope Hendrich XV and is serving in the same capacity to the present Pope, Pius XI. He is a Knight Commander of the Crown of Italy.

'85—William Shubael Conant is a member of the Standing Committee of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers on “Education and Training for the Industries.” He presented a professional paper at the spring meeting of the Society at White Sulphur Springs, Va.

'87—Everett Pepperell Smith became Rector of the American Church, Geneva, Switzerland, in January, 1921. Mr. Smith writes that the parish is a working example of Christian unity and that there is a permanent group of Americans that is unusually interesting, as practically all are people of wide experience, high character and very definite ideals. There is more variety and more demand for resourcefulness than in a parish in America. The background of international understandings through the League of Nations adds greatly to the interest of Church life in Geneva. Each of the seven years of his work has had its own characteristics, as when the American Red Cross closed its Paris office and withdrew its paid workers in Europe Mr. Smith happened to be Chairman of the local Chapter of the American Red Cross in Geneva and had to conduct the Sixth Annual American Red Cross Roll Call for Europe, except Scandinavia and England, but including North Africa. The next year he was asked to do it again, but declined on account of his parish work.

WILLIAM STANLEY EMERY
You can count the boys in a School, but you can’t count the possibilities in a boy.

On a certain “Thursday Evening” in 1872 Doctor Coit noted that our number had reached “one hundred & fifty & three,” the same as the number of “great fishes” brought safely to land on the Sea of Galilee; “and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken”—every boy worth while in a school of unbroken unity was his theme.

No boy in the room rose more eagerly to those ideals than my desk mate Stanley Emery. Loyalty to the Doctor and to the School was almost a passion with the boy. And yet no one would have foretold the power of the man to come.

The seed was sound, of the best New England Stock, the father, Charles Emery, a Sea Captain of the old merchant sailing ships; the mother Susan Hilton Emery, all gentleness and love with the moral earnestness of the Puritan. Stanley bore the marks of both. One might say truly even of the small boy that the prevailing note of his character was gentleness toward the weak coupled with stern morality. The sailor’s son also was manifest in his natural adaptability to life on a boat.

Cruising along the coast, one Summer evening we anchored off the little town of Portsmouth, R. I. Stanley said, “I believe that I was born and baptized in this town:” So after supper we hunted up the old Church and found the record. He had, however, no recollection of the place, and when he came to St. Paul’s in 1870, his home was at Dorchester, Mass.

The writer of this sketch joined Stanley in the Second Form, 1872. I found him the leader among his fellows, active in sports and a tireless worker. He was the first boy to hold out the hand of fellowship, a fellowship and understanding unbroken to the day of his death. His absolute integrity and unselfishness brought him all the honors his comrades could bestow: Captain of the Isthmian Club, President of the Missionary Society and of the K. K. (Καλλίν Καγαθόν). The K. K. was his specialty, a self perpetrating group of boys to promote loyalty to the school.

Though the best bowler of his day and a hard man to dislodge from the wicket or stop on the foot-ball field, what set the boy apart from his fellows was his intense religious sense. Free from all cant he was always at the early Eucharist and at every voluntary religious meeting. He was an accurate and acceptable leader of the choir as a powerful soprano, and later he filled in with bass. Church music was always one of his joys; and the music of his own life forbade evil talk or deed in his presence. Popularity had no charm for the boy any more than for the man, he was too bold for righteousness. The free and easy notions so prevalent among boys and men had no place with him and went to cover before him, sometimes with a snarl.

The boy grew into the apostle with no interest in the “uppermost rooms at feasts” or the “broad Phylacteries” of the Priest, or to be called of men Rabbi (D.D.), or even Father; his whole energy was centered on proclaiming by word and deed the Gospel of Jesus. How beautifully and effectually let his witnesses testify:

Also a member of the Executive Council, a trustee of St. Mary’s School, Chaplain of the County Medical Association, several times delegate to the General Convention and a member of the Concord School Board for nine years.

Everyone testifies that Mr. Emery put his whole soul into whatever he did. He always counted. The present beautiful and attractive site of the new High School in Concord is one of the numberless examples of his effectual persistence in what seemed best.

Indefatigable in all details, he was, nevertheless, an omnivorous reader on the lines of his calling. And this came out in the deep spirituality of his preaching, and in the pastoral care of his people. His printed guides issued from time to time, as helps to the higher spiritual living of us all, were wonderful examples of the union of his own inner life with his God.

His vision of the Church was that of his master—“That they all may be one.” Party spirit had no place in his life.

As a man at College and at the Seminary St. Paul’s was ever in his thoughts, and his longing was to give his life to her who had given him so much. The stern sacrifice began when he realized that his health forbade. With no proper recreation at the Seminary he seemed unable to throw off the dejection that crept upon him over his mother’s failing health. He was on the verge of a nervous breakdown during the period of his mastership at St. Paul’s. If it had not been for one who risked all to save him it looked as if that might have been the end. Under the Sunshine of a beautiful home life, however, his soul at once began to blossom into the sweet, strong manhood, the flower of which is best known in the city and surroundings of Concord. As one said on returning from the funeral, “The people of this city do not know yet what they have lost.”

It takes the world a long time to estimate eternal values.
One thing ought to be told for all St. Paul's men to read on the walls of her Chapel; Stanley Emery, backed by Dr. and Mrs. Coit was the actual builder. He had no financial backing or personal friends among the rich, but he started in to raise $100,000. and his energy and faith knew no discouragement till it was accomplished.

His marching song in the words of the Psalmist, were those of the great African missionary, Hanington. Day by day as he took up his journey to the interior with snow capped Kilamanjaro in the distance the intrepid missionary sang “I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh even from the Lord who hath made heaven and earth... The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth and for evermore.”

Again and again were those words on the lips of our friend during the last days. For some months he had realized that his heart might stop at any time. But always after the trying attacks were over the smile of perfect peace would return to shine upon his loved ones. Even on Sunday after a prolonged attack he recovered, to smile and talk peacefully of his freedom from pain. But early on Monday he breathed his last in the cottage at Hopkinton, for more than thirty years the place of his days of rest.

His study at the Rectory in Concord seemed the fitting place for the body of such a workman. So it was there that his flock came for a last look at their faithful pastor and friend. From there, early Wednesday morning, after family prayer, the body was taken to the Church and rested in the Choir during the Eucharist. The Bishop led in that service and also at Midday when the Church was packed with Stanley’s friends. We laid his body at a beautiful spot in Blossom Hill near the grave of the late Bishop Parker; those two so close as boys at school and in all the ideals of manhood, together in Concord during the last years of devoted companionship in the work of their Master; and now together in the joys of Paradise, while their bodies lie side by side in the land they loved.

As we returned from the hallowed spot there came to mind the words written by Weir Mitchell as he felt his end coming:

“I know the night is near at hand,
The mists lie low on hill and bay,
The Autumn sheaves are dewless, dry;
But I have had the day.”

“Yes, I have had, dear Lord, the day
When at Thy call I have the night,
Brief be the twilight, as I pass
From light to dark, from dark to light.”

FREDERICK JOHN KINGSBURY
'76-'80

Fred Kingsbury was at St. Paul's for four years and in that time he won the affection and respect of boys and masters. He was never an athlete but a steady, industrious member of the School community.

In the later years of his life he took a marked interest in the welfare of St. Paul's. He was a consistent and generous contributor to various alumni undertakings and for the past three years was the faithful and efficient Form Agent for the Form of 1882, conscientious and indefatigable.

The tribute which follows is from a lifelong friend.

Frederick John Kingsbury who died at his home in New Haven, Connecticut, on Monday, July 11, 1927, was one who reflected great credit on St. Paul's School, by his life of peculiar steadfastness and devotion to the highest things of life.

Mr. Kingsbury was born in Waterbury, Connecticut, in 1863. His family has been for more than two hundred years identified with the developing life of New England. The first of the Kingsbury family to settle in America was Henry Kingsbury, who came from Suffolk County, England, in 1635 with Governor Winthrop. His immediate ancestor, Frederick J. Kingsbury, was one of the most prominent and useful men in Connecticut. He lived long and successfully. He received the degree of Doctor of Laws from both Williams and Yale. For a long time he was a member of the Yale Corporation.

The New Haven Journal and Courier in an article at the time of his death says, "As the senior Kingsbury, who was long a member of the Yale Corporation, merged contrasting fields of affairs, business and civic, with the refinements of literature and the diligence of historic research, so the son was not content until he carried the finer things, of which his personal charm and inherent courtesy were expressions, into his business.

"At this point he did pioneer work. He was a fine type of the New England industrial leader, combining sound judgment and enterprise with warm human interest in the happiness and welfare of his associates and employes. The Bridgeport Brass Co., his major business concern, was among the first industries to give serious thought and effort to better understanding and closer cooperation between management and men, and has been active and influential in developing industrial education and welfare in all its phases, also employee representation in works councils and other progressive steps toward good relations. He was the most active lay leader in projecting the Connecticut industrial conference held annually at Camp Hazen and the moving spirit in organizing a permanent state industrial council to foster year round "Y" service throughout the state among industrial men and boys."

Fred Kingsbury seemed to carry on the ideals of his illustrious family in a very real sense. As a business man he was not only successful but carried these finer things of life, human brotherhood and a mutual understanding between employer and employed into actual practice. He was a fine type of New England industrial leader.

After leaving St. Paul's School Mr. Kingsbury went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, where he took a special course in Mechanical Engineering. His business career began with the Scovill Mfg. Co. in Waterbury. In 1889 he went to Bridgeport and finally became President of the Bridgeport Brass Co. During the larger part of his mature life he made his home in New Haven. He was actively identified with Y.M.C.A. work. He was a devoted Churchman, being a member of the Vestry of St. Thomas's Church in New Haven. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Adele Townsend Kingsbury of New Haven; one daughter, Mrs. Richard C. Sargent of New Haven; one son, Frederick J. Kingsbury, Jr.; and two sisters, the Misses Alice and Edith Kingsbury of Waterbury.

JOHN PRINCE ELTON, '84.

FRANCIS CUNNINGHAM BISHOP
Born June 20, 1872—Died September 2, 1927
1885-1890

Captain of the Shattucks and of the Delphian football team, of which club he was one of the founders; gentleman and sportsman and one of the finest men and truest friends that ever looked through two eyes. Beloved by all everywhere and in every walk of life. I believe that Frank Bishop did not have a single enemy. His fiery quick temper and his flashing black eyes faded into smiles more quickly than they rose in anger. I had the good fortune to take a trip to the Argentine with him, shortly after his first illness. Even among foreigners in Buenos Aires, as on the ship going down and coming back, it was always the same thing "who is your friend. He is such a thoroughbred"—everybody loved him. At the funeral services at St. Mark's Church, Mt. Kisco, the Rector, Canon Pritchard said “I am going to break a rule of mine and depart from the regular service of the prayer-book, for it is not often that a community has in its midst a living example of courage, cheerfulness and kindliness in the face of suffering and physical disability. Such an example our community has had in Frank Bishop for the past few years.” Frank Bishop and I had known each other since 1885 and many who read the ALUMNI HORAE had known him as long. They will recall the rowing on Long Pond and the football and track athletics at the Lower Grounds. Always a fighter but always a fair one. He loved St. Paul’s and everything connected with it. We have spent hours reminiscing over the good times at school. Only a few weeks before his death he had a crowd of us in gales of laughter telling how “Daddy” Morrill having told me to behave had sent Frank to get his famous ruler, with which all boys in those days were acquainted. On Frank’s return to the classroom in the basement of the present big study, he was flabbergasted when “Daddy” Morrill said, “Bishop hold out your hand,” and Frank, instead of the writer, received three good smacks. He never quite forgave the Spartan for that, what Frank considered rank injustice. Of course Frank got what he deserved. He and Freddy Perkins were disorderly; I was innocent of any wrongdoing. I could recall a hundred different incidents of our life at School but those of you who read this and were there in our time will remember them yourselves. Frank Bishop through his life was the same “fine fellar” that we knew him to be at school. One of God’s real noblemen. We who knew him as intimately in after life as we did at school will never cease to miss him; his happy smile, his hearty choking sort of laugh, his big heart; and, during the last few years his indomitable courage and unselfishness.
