ANNIVERSARY—1933

“What so rare as a day in June” when that day is Anniversary at St. Paul’s, under smiling skies. It really seems as if Nature were trying to make up to us for the Rector’s absence.

This year an experiment was tried in shifting the date of the Anniversary to the weekend, thus making it easier for the Alumni, parents and friends, to attend.

Friday afternoon saw the boat races held under perfect weather conditions at Long Pond, with the Shattuck first crew winning and generally predominant, and subsequently raising its own flag at the traditional flag-pole ceremony. Where in America is there such a scene as that which occurs at our annual boat races? It is all so simple and spontaneous, with no staging and no hullabaloo. We sit on the banks of lovely Long Pond in groups and clusters. We visit and foregather with old friends; we try to be calm if we have a youngster in one of the boats; we end up by yelling ourselves hoarse. All very boyish, all very silly, all very real. Perhaps in no other thing is the underlying idea of sport at St. Paul’s better illustrated than in rowing. Flotilla! With fourteen crews lined up and six more waiting in the boat-houses because some of the boats have to be used twice. One hundred and eighty boys rowing to a sportsmanlike victory or defeat on one afternoon. Can it be approached elsewhere?

Saturday morning, the Trustees met with the Vice-Rectors, Kittredge and Monie, to hear of a school well run and functioning smoothly. Aside from the gain to the Rector in needed relaxation from long and continuous strain, there is an added gain to the School by his absence, even though we miss him. It is good for morale to have the second in command take the helm and give the orders once in a while.

The Alumni meeting was brief and well attended, perhaps a case of cause and effect. Long sermons make short conversion. Then the luncheon at the Upper, with Reeve Schley in the Chair and with Lieutenant Governor Gaspar E. Bacon and Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills as speakers. Two excellent addresses delivered by men trained in public speaking and public affairs, who held their audience and provoked thought. A thoroughly satisfactory luncheon — one of our best.
Gifts to the School include a swimming pool by that perennial donor and generous-hearted trustee, Dr. Hart, and a scholarship given by another constant and generous alumnus giver. Charles D. Dickey, Jr., in memory of L. W. Dickey (1920-1926). The announcement of this gift develops the fact that since Dr. Drury has been at the School, half a million dollars have been presented in scholarships.

After luncheon, the annual photograph and march to the Lower Grounds, the President of the Alumni Association leading with the President of the Sixth Form (to show him the way), and then a long procession of alumni, by seniority of classes, ending with the Sixth Form in their very smart looking blazers; and the band — unlike the rest of us — was seldom deflated and was actually very good; even the most tone-deaf could keep step.

The finals in the track sports are run and then comes the giving of the prizes and the awarding of the endless challenge cups. Let there be a special medal for tact awarded to Arthur L. McKim, (1911-1915), master of ceremonies, who realized that the boys were interested in the prizes and not in hearing an oration. The Old Hundreds won the track meet on points, Caspar Wister, (1924-1928), won the Alumni dash — the writer not competing — and Buckner won the Gordon medal, receiving it at the hands of Pat Gordon himself.

Saturday night is dedicated to the Sixth Form dance at the Upper in anticipation of which Alumni House had been bulging with “the sisters, the cousins, and the aunts.”

Sunday, Whitsunday, was another heavenly day. The solo in “Oh, Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem,” was sung by Toland, (1909-1913), and the sermon was preached by our beloved trustee, Bishop Dallas.

Sunday afternoon, an excellent concert was given under the leadership of Mr. Thomas, the Choir and the School orchestra contributing many excellent numbers. This is a phase of cultural development in which so far St. Paul’s has lagged behind other schools and colleges. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have before them a remarkable opportunity for the display and development of their own remarkable talents.

With the falling of the shadows the exodus began. Another Anniversary — the Seventy-seventh — was over. To the Vice-Rectors, Kittredge and Monie, our hearty and sincere thanks; to Ed Toland, and countless others, too, our unstinted admiration for staff work that made for our comfort and that never let us hear the machinery creak.

John C. Jay ('91-'97.)

Back Numbers of Alumni Horae

Any Alumni having old copies of The Alumni Horae, and not desiring to keep them, are requested to send them to The Alumni Association of St. Paul’s School, 522 Fifth Avenue, New York, in order that other Alumni who want to have a bound set can obtain copies which they lack. A copy of Volume 3, Number 3 is now wanted.
ANNIVERSARY LUNCHEON

REEVE SCHLEY, '99, President of the Corporation of the School, presided at the luncheon. In his opening remarks, which were mostly impromptu, he mentioned his favorite topic, that is, the possibility of fewer St. Paul’s boys going to college because of the present economic pressure, although few of the boys’ parents have taken Dr. Drury’s suggestion that too many boys have gone to college in the past. He further stated that, if changing conditions should indicate its desirability, the School might be forced to give a course somewhat broader in scope than the present courses which are so closely confined to college entrance requirements — to give the boy a broader view of the arts, or perhaps some training of a more utilitarian nature.

Mr. Schley then mentioned a letter that he had recently received from Dr. Drury from which he read the following extract: “As I exist for the School, it seems natural to link my mental fitness with benefits to St. Paul’s.” (This refers to Dr. Drury’s leave of absence and the studies that he is pursuing at Cambridge University.) Mr. Schley also read a cablegram that the Trustees had sent to Dr. Drury, worded as follows: “Trustees send Anniversary greetings. Perfect weather. Large attendance. Shattuck Old Hundred victories. Concerned but confident of your success in approaching examinations in your courses.”

The two speakers of the occasion, Lt. Governor Gaspar G. Bacon of Massachusetts and the Hon. Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, were then introduced by Mr. Schley. Their remarks in part follow:

ADDRESS OF HON. GASPAR G. BACON

I do not urge any young man to go into politics. It is a disagreeable business. Anyone who runs for public office will experience all kinds of unfair tactics, misrepresentation and personal abuse. The most valuable assets that a politician can have are a thick skin and a sense of humor. You and I were taught at school the value of sportsmanship and fair play. These are rare in politics.

Yet, under our system of popular government, the people must elect somebody to conduct the public business. The job of governing must be done. The job is worth doing, and no job worth doing is always pleasant. The real satisfaction of contributing something constructive to the public service, of doing something of benefit to one’s fellow-men, compensate for all the difficulties of attaining the office.

I once had the temerity to write a book, unfortunately not a history of Cape Cod, but a few random thoughts under the title “Government and the Voter,” and in this book I defined politics as follows: “Politics is the art of associating with human beings. It is the task of reconciling conflicting interests, harmonizing hostile factions, educating the suspicious and the ignorant, stimulating the indifferent and the selfish, promoting the common welfare, and inculcating in our citizens a greater respect for law and a higher sense of individual obligation to the community. As in most other activities of life, results can best be attained in the spirit of compromise, the spirit of self-restraint and self-sacrifice, and with the sincere desire to arrive at some common understanding.

There is no time to enlarge upon any of the elements of politics, but you can readily appreciate its scope. I am therefore always hopeful that when the opportunity offers and the urge is sufficient, those who have had the advantages of training and have the character necessary to withstand the pressure of selfish interests, will enter the political field. In these next few years of all times we need those who have the capacity to think and the courage to perform.

It is the fashion to criticise those in public life. But, as in all other occupations, there are the good, bad and indifferent. I have only to mention three men, among many others, who represent the best and have rendered exceptional service.

First, is your own Governor of New Hampshire, John G. Winant. Of sterling character and recognized ability, he inspires confidence and respect in government.

Second, is your former Senator George H. Moses, for many years a strong influence in Washington for sound and constructive thinking. The Senate today sorely needs his experience and capacity.

And third, the gentleman who is to speak next. Trained through a long and useful service in the New York Legislature and in Congress, he has become the foremost authority on government finance. He was called to the Treasury Department, and through a most difficult period he maintained and safeguarded the financial structure of the United States. He resisted all attempts to impair the National credit by extravagance, unsound financing or artificial methods. The public owes a debt of gratitude to the former Secretary of the Treasury, Ogden L. Mills.

With men such as these in positions of responsibility, we cannot despair of politics. Such public officials merit our confidence and support. They need our help. They are serving us, and helping to preserve the fundamental institutions upon which depend the security, the welfare and the happiness of every citizen in the land.

ADDRESS OF HON. OGDEN L. MILLS

This is an occasion when everyone is happy. The older members of this brotherhood are glad to be back in school, while the younger ones look forward with equal joy to leaving for the summer vacation. With the minds of all engrossed in thoughts of either the past or the future, my claims upon your attention will be brief.

I assume that my remarks should, more particularly, be addressed to the graduating class, and that those invited to speak are expected to contribute some observations drawn from their experience, which, in my case, includes twenty-five years of political activity and some eighteen in the public service.

We must skip lightly over the four years which most of you Sixth Formers are planning to spend in college, though I cannot refrain from saying that I hope you will have the wisdom to look upon them as a never-to-return opportunity to acquire that broad culture which affords an unending resource and refuge from what may be called the business of life, rather than to specialize in those particular branches of education which, from a utilitarian standpoint, you may look upon as of practical benefit. In the rushing stream, do not overlook the deep quiet pools where tranquility, strength and a surer vision are to be found.

When the college years, in turn, take their place alongside the happy and care-free ones which you are now terminating, you will have to determine to what activity you are prepared to devote yourself, and what others are worthy of your time and attention. If you do not enter the public service, Government unquestionably must have a leading place in the second group. You must interest yourself in Government, not just as an abstract duty, but in your own self-interest. You will find that Government, in one way or another, consumes about twenty per cent. of your earnings. In other words, if you work three hundred days a year, sixty of those days will be spent not for the support of yourself and your family, but of the various governments. You will pay, in large measure, for the mistakes and improvidence of the generation next preceding yours; and if you want to avoid a repetition of our errors and to obtain some reasonable return on these two months of work which you will put in every year, you will have to devote the additional necessary time and attention to the public business.

Moreover, you will find, if present tendencies continue, that, in one way or another, Government injects itself more and more into the daily life of the citizen. For him to refrain from a voice in Government is, then, in large measure to abandon to others the management of his own affairs. To use a slang phrase, the trouble in politics with “letting George do it” is, that George does. And how! and at what cost!

To be effective, you should join a Party. The Parties in this country are essential elements in our machinery of Government, and offer the most convenient medium for those who think along the same lines to act together. Discretion forbids my suggesting which Party you should join.

And now, what of making the public service a life career? Some of the drawbacks are sufficiently obvious. The public servant nowadays must have the hide of a rhinoceros. He must expect all manner of unjust criticism and misrepresentation of motives. Even if successful, the results will rarely be commensurate with the efforts. But there are very great compensations. There is the sheer fun of the game, with its constant element of contest and uncertainty. Above all, because of the element of service, there is a keener sense of satisfaction in accomplishment than in most other fields of activity, though the satisfaction must be based on one’s own impartial estimate rather than on popular judgment, which is just as likely to give credit where none is due as to withhold it where most deserved. We none of us want to be passengers in the adventure called life. We all want to pull our weight in the boat. The opportunity to do so which public life affords is its one worth-while reward. If a man be wise enough to be content with it, he is spared many of the disappointments usually associated with a political career, and, come what may, success is his.
I cannot, however, advise any young man, unless he be very unusually situated, to enter politics with a view to making it a life occupation, not because of any of the drawbacks which I have mentioned, but because of the extremely hazardous character of the occupation. It may be terminated abruptly at any time, in fact, the odds are it will. In our country, one defeat at the polls, whether it comes early or after many years in the public service, is very apt to return a man to private life for good. If such a defeat comes early, the problem solves itself, but I have known many men in middle life who, after having severed business and professional connections for years, suffer political defeat and find themselves adrift with nothing much to turn to, with still many of the best years of their lives before them. They are tragic cases. This is the principal reason why men drift into the public service more by chance than as an act of deliberate choice. Certainly it is an unwise choice unless you develop at the same time another occupation or avocation to which you may turn, should the public career come to an untimely end.

You will be told that you are going out into a brand new world, where change is the order of the day and where experience and tradition no longer furnish very safe guides. There is some justification for such claims. While men have been confronted with changing conditions ever since the world began, today the time element has been very much shortened. Changes which formerly took place over the span of a generation or generations, now occur within a decade or less. At the same time, so many long-established landmarks were obliterated, and so many of the foundations upon which a reasonably stable world rested were undermined by the Great War, that our universe appears to be more plastic than heretofore.

But there is danger in drawing too sweeping conclusions. While the shortened time factor is a new element, it is to a considerable extent offset by a more widespread knowledge and the rapid and enormous accumulation of current information made almost immediately available in constantly widening circles by means of improved communications. So that, while the scene may shift much more rapidly, at the same time we have developed the means of readjusting our position with equal speed.

As to the second generalization, there is one all-important element which remains unchanged, and unchanging — human nature. In the field of Government this is the all-important element. We must never forget “that politics are based not so much on human reasoning as on human nature, of which reason is but a part and by no means a preponderant one.” While recognizing, therefore, that experiment and trial are necessary if we are to move forward, I cannot believe, as so many apparently do, that a disregard of experience constitutes wisdom, and a jettisoning of firmly-established traditions and standards is essential to progress. I am confirmed in this belief by observing that nearly all of the most brilliant so-called innovations have been tried in one form or another by previous generations of supposedly less enlightened men.

Your generation, as has every other, will doubtless consider it its duty and opportunity to remake and remodel. You will come across institutions, traditions and customs that seem to bar the immediate attainment of a desired goal. Do not be impatient. Search for the reason underlying them. You will always find one. If the tradition or custom be firmly fixed, the reason will be well-grounded. Institutions, traditions and customs do not arise blindly, but in response to definite needs. They are the fruits of the collective wisdom of successive generations moulded from time to time to meet new and changing conditions.

Consider the case of Democracy and of representative institutions. Everywhere today they are under indictment because of inefficiency. Now, no one, I suppose, ever claimed that Democratic Government is a particularly efficient one. But there are other qualities besides efficiency that experience has demonstrated are even more important. The men who founded our Government, for instance, valued individual liberty and freedom above all else. I suppose I'm a reactionary, but I still vote for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness as contrasted with the Five-Year Plan.

The destruction of representative government is too high a price to pay for an efficiency that has yet to be demonstrated. The case for dictatorship has still to be proved. The case for self-government does not. There is no fundamental breakdown of representative institutions. My experience with legislative bodies has taught me that they are a fair cross-section of those that they represent. They cannot be expected to move very far in advance of those from whom they draw their authority. At present, for the time being at least, general knowledge and understanding have not quite kept pace with the development of new and complex conditions. To use this as an excuse for breaking down representative government is to deny the ability of the people under modern conditions to govern themselves. This we cannot admit. The remedy lies in increasing the knowledge and understanding of the average citizen, rather than giving to the few the authority to think and to act for the many. This is admittedly a slow process. But it is well worth the time and effort. For all experience is there to show that arbitrary power and individual freedom cannot live side by side.

Let me leave one further thought with you. The trials and tribulations of a single generation are not of any great consequence in the life of a nation, which is measured not in terms of decades but of centuries. No generation, to escape its own temporary troubles, however heavy they may be, has the right to take such action as will alter for the worse the course of the nation’s life. The selfish, short-time view should never be allowed to prevail over the longer and more generous one. Had our Revolutionary ancestors consulted their immediate comforts, we would have had no country. Had the Civil War generation followed the easy way, we would have had no Union. Under the pressures of the day, let us never lose sight of this higher duty. To live up to it may require in peacetime the very qualities which War brings out — self-sacrifice, endurance, faith and a resolute determination not to subordinate principle to expediency. They are the qualities which this institution fosters and develops. They are part of the equipment every boy carries away from Concord. So that when your test comes, to meet it in full measure, you have but to be true to the traditions, the spirit and the ideals of St. Paul’s School.

THE experiment of having Anniversary over the week-end instead of on Wednesday and Thursday, is a success. We had more alumni and parents back this Anniversary than we did last Anniversary, which is saying a good deal, in view of the financial crisis. Only one objection to holding it over the week-end has been recorded against an otherwise unanimous expression of approval.

We were fortunate in having excellent weather, the day of the boat races being a perfect summer day, and a rain storm, which threatened during the track meet, obligingly held off until just after the prizes had all been given out, and then stopped in time not to interfere with the dance.

We are somewhat at a loss for space in which to house alumni over Anniversary. This year an extra house containing fifteen beds was available for the older men, but normally we have only the "Pest House," a few rooms in the Infirmary reserved for Trustees, a half-dozen extra rooms throughout the various School buildings, and the gymnasium. This year we had twenty-six beds set up in the gymnasium, which are all the extra beds owned by the School. They were all applied for in writing. As usual, a dozen extra alumni who had not answered our invitation appeared, requested a bed in the gymnasium, and were told that they had all been reserved for others who had applied in advance. And as usual, eight or ten of the people who had applied for these beds failed to show up, and failed to notify the School that they were not coming.

On the whole, however, our scheme of having written cards enclosed with the invitation has been far more satisfactory than any previous arrangement, and Anniversary was a great success. To Miss Putnam we again owe our sincere thanks for her painstaking and efficient management.

Chairman, Anniversary Committee.

May 31, 1933.  William Hale Harkness, Treasurer.
On motion duly seconded, this report was approved and ordered filed.

The President then made a short speech, explaining the arrangements with The Kappa Alpha Society for maintaining a joint office in New York City; also, the project, now under way, of publishing a new Directory of the Alumni of St. Paul's School. He asked the approval of the action of the Treasurer in making a contribution to the St. Paul's School Camp and Coit House, from the profits of the Hockey Game in New York on December 22d, 1932. The following resolutions were offered, and were by formal vote unanimously approved and ratified:

Resolved, That the action of the President in extending the agreement now existing between The Kappa Alpha Society and the Alumni Association of St. Paul's School for the maintenance of a joint office and staff in Room 730 in 522 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., for a period of two years ending April 30, 1935, be approved and ratified.

Resolved, That the work already done toward the publication of a Directory of the Alumni of St. Paul's School be approved and ratified and that the Executive Committee be hereby authorized to continue the work and effect publication when, and in such manner as, it deems advisable.

Resolved, That the action of the Treasurer of the Alumni Association in making contributions to the St. Paul's School Camp of $1,050 and to Coit House of $350 from the profits ($1,452.39) of the Hockey Game between the School Team and the Princeton Freshmen on December 22, 1932 be, and it hereby is, approved and ratified.

W. Fellowes Morgan, '76, Chairman, not being present, there was no report from the Standing Committee.

Clarence E. West then read the report of Carll Tucker, '00, Chairman of the Alumni Fund Committee.

REPORT OF CHAIRMAN OF 1933 ALUMNI FUND COMMITTEE TO ANNUAL MEETING OF ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL

The policy adopted by the 1933 Alumni Fund Committee was clearly expressed by the President of the Alumni Association, Mr. John C. Jay, when he wrote the Chairman in December, 1932, as follows:

"I do not think we should urge the Alumni to give to our Fund, but I do believe we should give them the opportunity of doing so if they wish. I think this coming year is not one in which the Fund should be used by the School for material things, but should be used to help out sons of Alumni and kindred cases, who through the very workings of the present crisis and hard times might have to leave the School unless this friendly hand were given them."

Following Mr. Jay's recommendation, the Trustees of the School, in January 1933, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the intention of the Trustees to use the gift to the School from the Alumni Fund of 1933 to give scholarship aid to boys who are sons of Alumni or members of St. Paul's families, in such manner as the Rector, in his discretion, may determine."

Shortly after the Form Agents received their instructions, the bank holiday occurred and they were immediately asked to postpone all activities in connection with the Alumni Fund. Although they were later asked to write their classmates for donations, still the interruption in their activities not only decreased the amount received but undoubtedly delayed the progress of the Fund, as is evidenced by the large receipts during the last three weeks in May, during which time the gifts have practically equalled the total amount received to the 10th of May. This leads the Chairman to believe that a substantial amount will be added to the Fund before the end of the year.

Upon the recommendation of Mr. Albert L. Smith, the 1908 Form Agent, it was decided not to collect a 25th Anniversary Fund but to postpone the solicitation for a Special Fund until their 30th Anniversary.

This year we have received a total of $9,106.00 from 757 Alumni, the average gift being $11.97. This total includes three special gifts amounting to $41.80. This compares with the last year's report at Anniversary of gifts amounting to $11,918 from 1044 Alumni, the average gift last year being slightly over $11.

As usual, the percentage list is figured on the number of contributors in each form and not on the amount collected.

W. Willis Reese, Form Agent for 1885, obtained the best percentage, having received 22 contributions from a possible 45, making his percentage 48.88. C. Jared Ingersoll, Form Agent for 1913, stood second highest, with a percentage of 45.07. W. Strother Jones, Form Agent for 1877, was third on the list, his percentage being 42.86. He received three contributions from a possible seven.

Although the Form Agents were asked to stress particularly the number of subscribers, still the Alumni Fund Committee is greatly interested in the dollars and cents collected. Samuel T. Callaway led this list with $550 from the Form of 1900, which is $6 more than he had turned in last Anniversary. Ward Cheney, Form Agent for 1918, was next, having received $465 from his classmates. And Dr. Joseph S. Wheelwright, of the Form of 1893, was third, having received $427. It is interesting to note that these three Form Agents collected approximately 16% of the total.

The Form Agents will continue to receive contributions during the balance of this year and all Alumni who have not yet contributed are urged to support the Fund.

On behalf of the Committee, the Chairman thanks all of the Form Agents for the difficult task which they all so cheerfully undertook.

Respectfully submitted,

CARLL TUCKER,
Chairman 1933 Alumni Fund.

June 1, 1933.

P. S.—Since this report was compiled, 20 additional contributions amounting to $113.50 have been received.

Arthur S. Pier, '90, Chairman of the Committee of the History of St. Paul's School and Editor, spoke of the work already accomplished. He said he had written six chapters and hoped to have the book completed at the time of the next annual meeting.

Edward D. Toland, '04, Chairman of the Anniversary Committee, made a few remarks, welcoming the Alumni and telling what arrangements had been made for their accommodation and comfort during their stay.

Willard Scudder, '85, Chairman of the Committee on Honorary Members, proposed the names of the following three Masters:

Charles Thomas Webb
George Macfeely Conwell
Roger Richmond Eastman

On motion duly made and seconded, the Secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for their election as Honorary Members.

Clarence E. West, '97, offered a report on the Alumni Directory.

REPORT OF THE 1933 DIRECTORY OF ALUMNI

At a meeting of the Standing Committee of the Alumni Association held on November 14, 1932, it was decided that it would be desirable to publish a new Directory of Alumni. For several years the Association has published these Directories at intervals of five or six years, and, as the last Directory was published in 1928, that edition is very much out of date and incorrect; consequently, there is a widespread demand for a new Directory.

At this meeting, the President of the Alumni Association, Mr. Jay, the Secretary and Clerk, Mr. Treadwell, and the Executive Secretary, Mr. West, were authorized as a committee to investigate the matter and the Executive Committee of the Association was empowered to act as seemed advisable.

After careful investigation of the probable cost of a Directory similar to those previously published and consideration of the best way to proceed, on April 3rd, 1933, a prospectus of the proposed Directory was sent to every Alumnus, enclosing a reply card, on which Alumni were asked to report their present addresses and other data needed for the Directory, and an order card to be returned by those who wished to obtain copies of the Directory when published. It is proposed to issue the Directory in two forms, paper-bound at $1.00 per copy and cloth-bound at $1.50 per copy. As indicated in the Report of the Treasurer, the cost of this mailing has been $309.75 to date.

The results of this mailing, both in the number of reply cards and orders received, have exceeded expectations. Out of an approximate total of 3800 living Alumni, reply cards with addresses have been received from 2064 Alumni; paid orders have been received for 799 copies, the total receipts being $977.20.

In the near future follow-up requests for addresses will be sent to those Alumni who have not replied to the first mailing and every effort possible will be made to secure their addresses as well as those of the considerable number of Alumni whose present addresses are known to be wrong or who are carried on the missing list of the Alumni Office. In this connection, the Secretary wants to take this opportunity to thank the many Alumni who have so thoughtfully aided him in locating missing Alumni and obtaining correct addresses.

It is hoped that enough additional orders will soon be received to cover the entire cost of publication and that the considerable additional work necessary to secure correct addresses and other data will be completed so that the Directory can be published in the Autumn.

The President requested the Secretary to read the list of members deceased during the past year. All those present stood at attention while this list was read.

John C. Jay, '97, President, made his report for the year.

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

The President's report. I can see you all sinking into chairs in soggy resignation. Why must we Anglo-Saxons torture ourselves with statistics, and year in, year out, catalogue corporate activity just so that the record may be regular?

So, today, I shall be an iconoclast, and shall leave to the ALUMNI HORAE—that excellent recorder of our activities—the detailing of our meetings, our hockey game, our alumni fund, the meetings of our committees and sub-committees, and shall touch briefly on what I shall call the extra-curricular interests of your temporary representative on our Board of Trustees.

It is a human job, to have touch of elbow with such groups as the Trustees, the Standing Committee, the Form Agents—something to fire the most sluggish. To have, as has been my privilege, the difficulties and trials of more than one alumnus who wonders if his boy, too, can go to St. Paul's, is heart-awakening.

To maintain intimate touch with the administration of this great place is a stimulus lasting in character.

And then the mothers. God bless them all, and all their rumors and forebodings drear. As Josh Billings once said, "It ain't what people don't know that makes them ignorant; it's what they do know that ain't so." School rumors! You remember the Hindu proverb, "A sneeze in Bombay becomes a typhoon in Calcutta." No, Mrs. Grundy, I can assure you that Dr. Drury is coming back and isn't lingering on the banks of the Cam as Bishop of Ely. And there’s no truth in the story that the Gloomy Dean is leaving St. Paul’s in London to come to St. Paul’s in Concord.

The fact that all of you who are here, are here, means that St. Paul’s was more than a slip of film in the kaleidoscopic cinema of your life. If education interests you; if perchance you have a boy here; or if merely some homing instinct has brought you back — let me commend to you a book that a thoughtful friend and a great teacher sent me. It is called “School, Home & Co.”, and the friend who sent it to me is the author; and the author is Dr. Drury, who paused in a well-earned holiday abroad to remember my interest in St. Paul’s. Buy it today and learn from this collection of quite charming little essays the philosophy that lies behind the driving force of this remarkable place. It will help you to understand a creative and restless personality; it will be a check on smug complacency; it will interpret to you the very thing that is the basis and reason of our Alumni Association — the spirit of St. Paul’s.

The President then read the following interesting letter from the Rector:

Corpus Christi College,
Cambridge.

My dear Jack:

Won’t you say to the Old Boys who gather at the School for Anniversary how queer it seems to me not to be there and help to provide a royal welcome for them. I hope that splendid weather will surround all the exercises, and that there will be ample quiet spaces for old friends to “walk about Zion and tell the towers thereof,” as well as to chat in a leisurely way — so many sentences beginning “Do you remember the time that . . .?”

One is never far away from the School, in heart and mind, or in actual events. Were I in your midst, dear alumni, I should like to tell the older of you about a memorable visit to the cemetery at Rome on March 27, to the grave of Augustus Swift; and the younger old boys about the casting of our School bells at Croydon last Friday — when the beautiful gift in memory of Arthur Houghton, given by his son Arthur and their family, took final form. But these and other significant things must wait for my printed letter in next autumn’s ALUMNI HORAE.

Here at Corpus Christi my rooms look out on the very oldest structure in Cambridge. I can almost touch the pre-Norman tower of St. Bene’t’s Church from my windows.

There are four “old boys” of St. Paul’s now at Cambridge — Cadwalader, Hollister, Niles and Yool. All four dined with Mrs. Drury and me at the Bull a fortnight ago, and they will breakfast with me on Sunday, May 28th, after early service.

You may be sure that delightful as this University life is, and interesting as the four courses of lectures which I take are, I shall be glad, glad, GLAD, in mid-July, D. v., to arrive at our Jerusalem again. May peace and prosperity be within her walls, and in the lives of all her sons.

Ever yours, S. S. DRURY.

Thank you, dear J., for your last so-welcome letter.

By rising vote the President was instructed to send a cable of affectionate greeting to the Rector.

Abbot Treadwell, '81, Chairman of the Committee on Nominations, then submitted the list of names nominated by the Committee for officers and members of the Standing Committee for the ensuing year. (See last page.)

On motion duly made and seconded, the Secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for the election of the officers and members of the Standing Committee as nominated.

John C. Jay, ’97, the President, then reappointed the following Nominating Committee to serve for the ensuing year:

Abbot Treadwell, Chairman
Isaac Harter Henry B. Thompson, Jr.
John H. Stewart Henry M. Watts, Jr.

There being no further business brought before the meeting, it was voted to adjourn.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) ABBOT TREADWELL, Secretary.

FORTY-FIFTH REUNION OF '88 FIFTH FORM

The opinion seems to be that the Reunion was a great success. Through the kindness and consideration of the School authorities the Ogilvy House, 19 Fisher Road, was assigned to us for Headquarters and everything possible was done for our comfort. As the weather was perfect, it was all most pleasant. We attended all the ceremonies and events and on Friday evening held a reunion meeting at our G. H. Q. when we went over the list of our Form-mates and their life records and agreed that they were a very fine lot of men and a credit to the School.

On Saturday morning a special service was held in the Old Chapel. We formed in the anteroom of the big study and, while George Burleigh tolled the bell, marched in to our seats. A simple service was conducted by our Rev. William P. Niles, our old familiar hymns were sung, the list of our deceased was read — a most dignified and impressive ceremony. Following this we went to the School Cemetery and reverently laid a wreath of flowers on the grave of Dr. Henry A. Coit.

During the time of our Reunion we were together most of the time and many were the reminiscences and stories of our old school days. Out of an original list of 93 we have 46 remaining, all apparently in good health. Twelve of us were present:
At the last minute word was received from Benjamin W. Morris, Leonard Goodwin, and J. Kearsley Mitchell that unexpected engagements prevented their being present.

Several Alumni have been reported deceased, although it has not yet been possible to confirm these reports and ascertain the date and place. The Executive Secretary will appreciate hearing from any Alumni who can furnish detailed information about these men, who are as follows:

- Hector Harold Havemeyer, '97
- Fred Dwight Harris, '02
- Henry Swift Kimball, Jr., '18
- John Magee Boissevain, '19
- Edward Hamilton Hough, Jr., '21
- Herbert Timmins, '82

BISHOP DALLAS' SERMON AT ANNIVERSARY

WHITSUNDAY. This is an occasion. We celebrate the 1900th birthday of the Church. This little group of ordinary people here in St. Paul's Chapel is a symbol of a not-to-be-numbered horde of people gathered together the world over in all sorts of churches today to hold high festival over the birthday of the Church.

Like the day on which this school was born—or the day on which you were born—the excitement was only local, and that which came into being was insignificant but held possibilities.

The oriental description of it in the Book of The Acts of the Apostles runs the chance of hiding from a modern occidental mind that which really took place. Have you ever been in a group of men and women who had met to remember someone whom they loved? Only the other day a few of us wandered over a hillside to review the work a friend of ours had accomplished in the years gone by, and it was easy for us to plan with what spirit, at least, we would carry on his work (as we hope) in the days to come.

Nineteen hundred years ago today in the very ancient city of Jerusalem, a city that always collected the ends of the earth, were gathered together a few men and women who loved a Galilean peasant. He had been a friend to them in ways which they could never forget. He had taught them to see clearly just what they were and what other people were. He had taught them to think straight and not to fool themselves. Above all things He had taught them to respect themselves and to respect others. He taught this marvelous idea and experience to the poorest, the sickest, the dirtiest of them. He did the same for the rich, the well, and the powerful. Strange as it may seem, all of them who wanted to, saw what He was driving at.

But as usual the over-comfortable, the over-conservative, the afraid to grow crowd, the scared of an adventure lot, put Him out of the way. On His death those who were His friends, in their minds and hearts, died too. That is, they were as good as dead until they made the extraordinary discovery that His spirit, His very spirit was with them.

And so 1900 years ago today these lovers of His were sitting together in one place and as a group were welded together by such an intense awareness of His spirit in the group that the world has never since been the same. That's why you and I are here this morning.

There are two important parts of this scene and experience which you must always carry in your thought of it... It was a group experience (not an individual thing at all), and, secondly, it turned right away to work among people. It was democratic of the people. And so today we recall not only the birth of the Church but also the birth of ideas political and social the end of which does not yet appear. It would be easy to make a description of the growth of this child, and how it grew into the giant of today. But you can read that and observe it when you have more time.
Now, this prayer-book of ours is such a sane and sensible book. It saves us from a lot of the so-called artistic symbolism of our windows and embroidery and sculpture. Thank God this book leads us to the heart of the matter. For example, the little prayer set aside by the Church for this occasion says, “O God, who as at this time didst teach the hearts of thy faithful people, by sending to them the light of thy Holy Spirit; Grant us by the same Spirit to have a right judgment in all things.”

And the gospel lesson for this same occasion — “Jesus said — I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth.”

Every teacher, every true scientist, every searcher after reality, should this day rejoice at the remembrance of the birth of the group which has ever fought for goodness and beauty and truth.

To be sure there have been times when this fire has been almost quenched, times when it has flared up like a rocket to come down a blackened stick, times when it has only raised a smudge.

But when the free Spirit of God has been allowed to work amongst a group of the friends of Jesus, when democracy and truth and goodness and reality have been the fire and passion of a group of His friends, there you will witness in one generation and another a re-birth of the true Church of God — God stirring a group of people toward and among people. Just as each of us is re-born again and again, we never stay the same. So too, watch for the ever-changing, ever-new fellowship in the Church.

Apparently the Nazarene knew how we all enjoy talking, especially that kind of talk which settles nothing. He left no loophole 1900 years ago for His friends in Jerusalem, no more than He does today for His friends at St. Paul’s School. You will recall one young fellow who proposed one of those discussionable subjects. Don’t you imagine that the Master smiled when he laid before that young man’s vision the scene along the Jericho road, the priest, the Levite, the Samaritan — the wounded man. Who was his neighbor (what marvelous teaching)? Only one answer, “He that had mercy on him”— “Go thou and do likewise.”

If that young man did so he started in on a series of adventures — he began to grow. The Spirit of Truth is the mark of progress in everything. The Spirit of God, and God is Love, is the mark of progress in the economic and social world. Do I hear some friend of Jesus say — words, words, words. Very well — in the year 1933 the Church is being re-born when this takes place —

“I was an hungered and ye gave me meat —
I was thirsty and ye gave me drink —
I was a stranger and ye took me in —
Naked, and ye clothed me —
I was sick and ye visited me —
I was in prison and ye came unto me.”
BOOK REVIEW
SCHOOL, HOME & CO., by S. S. Drury
Farrar & Rinehart, New York. Price, $2.00

In his sixth published book, Dr. Drury directs fifteen essays at children, parents and teachers. Naturally he has most to offer to teachers. As a class, preparatory schoolmasters occupy by choice an enviably safe position in the modern world. Security and a comfortable routine should never blind them from their real mission of forming youth in the pattern of David, of "keeping David David," for as the author says, "David at school sometimes become Goliaths at college." Such metaphors are typical of the Rector's style, though most of them are more erudite and original. The reader seldom loses the atmosphere of preaching, not in the old-fashioned tone of the revivalist, but in the wise manner of a good father who all but breaks his heart to understand his children and still falls short of complete sympathy. With true humility he himself says that "we parents are a somewhat pathetic lot. We mean so well, we're so intense in sacrificial ambition for our children yet somehow we don't cooperate effectively in the scholastic quadrilateral — the community, parents, teachers, and pupils."

No one could question the Rector's own effective cooperation, yet in these essays he relies too confidently on the godliness of the reader to make a consistent appeal. In a most enlightened analysis of American financial snobbery, we find him stretching the Duke of Wellington's "we are all equal at the communion rail" into "life is one long communion rail."

If in a world in such dire need of idealists it seems unfair to carp at Dr. Drury's persistently religious tone, remember that all the recent services at St. Paul's have failed to turn out a fraction of the clergymen that came out of Concord before the War.

Two of the chapters in "School, Home & Co." are especially happy choices on the part of a headmaster. Justifiable criticism based on years of experience of masters and parents is couched in one case in "the journal of a spy" sent to a church school for a snobbish mother, and in the other through "unposted letters," the best and most relieving which we ever write.

Dr. Drury at the same time recognizes the generally changing standards of today and bases his remedies on God. "The source of obligation is God." Yet how is this belief to influence a youth brought up in the homes of agnosticism? The parents of today are not so much opposed to religious training as incapable of giving it. Their own doubts preclude the possibility of sectarian sincerity, and since their own Sundays, harmless-seeming enough to the world at large, are at the opposite pole to Dr. Drury's "great Sabbatical... of visions," the only people who prepare children for schools are at least indifferent to one of the cardinal aims of “School, Home & Co.” It is hard enough for them to agree with the dictum that “no boy should smoke until he has graduated from High School.” We may acknowledge “the best people as the self-controlled people,” yet differ as to what constitutes self-control.

Aside from the Rector’s general discussion of our relationship to adolescents, he offers much sound advice to the parent in the community, to school boards and trustees in particular. They should welcome his kindly and penetrating counsel. Masters themselves have still more to learn from him, and if they apply it all, we can look forward to an age of academies taught by saints with a conviction that would set our private school boys far above the general level of materialism. Everywhere are signs that post-war cynicism, or “tushing” as Dr. Drury describes it, is already headed for the limbo. It would be harder to maintain that improved behaviour in the American upper classes will follow the direction of “School, Home & Co.” Even the title of the book cannot get away from the social trends which it deplores.

NEW DIRECTORY OF ALUMNI

PUBLICATION of the new Directory of Alumni of the School is being seriously handicapped and delayed by the failure of over 1500 Alumni to fill out and return the address cards, containing the information needed for publication of the Directory, that were sent to them on April 3rd last. A sufficient number of orders for the Directory has been received to insure eventual publication; consequently, it is the wish of the Alumni Association to publish the Directory at the earliest possible date.

Within the near future, new address cards will be sent to those Alumni who have not returned those originally sent to them. These Alumni are strongly urged to send in their address cards immediately with the required information thereon. In addition, Alumni who want to obtain a copy of the Directory are advised to send in their orders with their address cards as only a sufficient number of copies will be published to fill the orders received up to the time of publication.

The addresses of a large number of Alumni as carried at the School are incorrect and consequently it has been impossible to request them to send us their correct addresses which, of course, we are very anxious to obtain before publication of the new Directory. We give below the names of these Alumni, arranged by Forms, and all Alumni who read this are asked to look through the list and send in the addresses of any of those whose addresses they know. This information should be sent to Clarence E. West, Executive Secretary, 522 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.
